THE CHRISTOPHER BATHURST PRIZE 2025 QUESTION

Can and should cryptocurrencies be treated in the law as just another asset or does the law need to craft an entirely new set of rules for them. It is essential to give examples in support of your answer. You can choose which legal system you deal with; you may want to look at more than one jurisdiction, on a comparative basis, although that is not necessary.

So far as substantive law is concerned, the SICC case of Quoine Pte Ltd v B2C2 Ltd [2020] SGCA(I) 02 is the locus classicus, although there have been other interesting Singapore cases. Pure theoretical discussion is unlikely to be sufficient.

Deadline for submission: 4.30 PM SGT, 30 June 2025
